Stuart Jeffcott has been working in energy efficiency for over 25 years. Stuart is currently the lead contractor for the IEA 4E’s Mapping and Benchmarking activities which seek to inform policy makers of potential product policy pathways through the benchmark of the performance of energy consuming products across international borders. However, over the last 15 years, much of Stuart’s focus has been on assisting policy makers in the Asia Pacific region develop product policy, particularly in the development and implementation of more efficient lighting. Stuart has worked with the Australian and Chinese governments in their development and implement of incandescent phase-out programs and, until the transfer of responsibilities to the United National Environment Programme (UNEP), Stuart was the operating agent for the lites.asia initiative (and supported the preceding CFLI and Eco-Asia activities).
